

Forests cover almost two-thirds of Georgia, making trees one of the state's most important natural resources. Georgia is the top forestry state in the U.S. and grows more trees than it cuts down. Pine trees are the most common and grow fast. Wood from Georgia forests is used to make paper, houses, furniture, and crayons. Forests also give homes to animals like deer, owls, and squirrels, and trees help clean our air and water.